Adobe Photoshop Elements:* This is a professional version of Photoshop. It's also a value-priced alternative to Adobe Photoshop. Adobe Photoshop Lightroom:* This program enables you to interact with individual images in your library and to develop a book of images and captions. Learn more in Book IV, Chapters. Adobe Photoshop Creative Suite:* Photoshop, Painter, and Illustrator are the basic applications in this suite, and the other two applications provide a more advanced set of tools for sophisticated image manipulation. You can learn more about Creative Suite in Book I, Chapter. Figure 2-3 shows the main Photoshop workspace. As shown in the figure, the main Photoshop workspace has a menu bar along the top, an area for your image at the top, and tabs along the left side that access specific areas of your image. The most important area of your image is a new window below the image, which enables you to manipulate your image in various ways. FIGURE 2-3: The main Photoshop workspace area. If you click the New Window button, shown in the margin, you open a new edit window, as shown in Figure 2-4. In this window, shown here and in a few other places in this book, you see the tools that enable you to create, edit, or copy and paste areas in your image. You can drag these objects around on your document or use the Tools panel to activate them. Photoshop has numerous ways to create a new window for your document. You can choose to create a new document (or not) from File⇒New. You can open a new image (File⇒New) or create a new image (File⇒New from existing). You can also create a new window by pressing Shift+Ctrl+N (Shift+⌘-N on a Mac) or the New icon in the taskbar. FIGURE 2-4: You can access tools and settings in a separate edit window to perform edits on the image.

Q: Django's change_list serializer has invalid filters I'm new to Django/DRF. I'm using django==2.2 and DRF==3.6.3. I have to create view that would return listing of items, ordered using date field in DB. So I have next 2 models: class Agent(models.Model): name = models.CharField(max_length=30) date = models.DateTimeField() class Request(models.Model): agent = models.ForeignKey(Agent, on_delete=models.CASCADE, related_name='requests') url = models.CharField(max_length=200) short_description = models.TextField() description = models.TextField(blank=True) date = models.DateTimeField() status = models.CharField(max_length=30, default='') In my app views I've created next view which works perfectly fine: @api_view(['GET']) def agent_requests_list(request): queryset = Agent.objects.all() return Response(serializer.data) The only problem is that I have to use dates from the DB, so I added 3 different field to my Request model: @property def date_from(self): return self.date_from.date @property def date_to(self): return self.date_to.date @property def date_filters(self): if self.request_date is None: raise ValueError("Date should not be empty") return self.request_date And serializer: class AgentRequestSerializer(serializers.ModelSerializer): date_from = serializers.DateField(format='%Y-%m-%d') date_to = serializers.DateField(format='%Y-%m-%d') date_filter = serializers.DateField(format='%Y-%m-%d')

The left is riding a huge wave of tech support for its efforts to convince people to mistrust the FBI and CIA. From the president down, it's getting a lot of help from tech and security experts. If you think maybe some of these experts have an ulterior motive, well, it's only because you're a Russian bot. "I think there's a substantial amount of bots," said cybersecurity expert Dan Guido on Wednesday's "The Daily" on Fox News. "I would not be surprised if more than half of the comments I'm seeing on Twitter are bots." Guido didn't just take aim at Twitter users, saying he'd seen many of the same bots on Facebook, as well. Also Read: Despite Guido's claim, it's no easy task to determine if the Twitterati are bots or otherwise. The company's own rules, of course, stipulate that "we do not consider users who engage with our service to be 'bots.'" Guido offered several reasons why some Twitter users could appear fake, from bot-like behavior to the fact that they all share the same 20 or so tweets with very similar messages. Of course, the same could be said of the accounts that post anti-Trump messages. Many of the same people could be bots and the same tweet could be copied and pasted as often as the Twitter user wants. But Guido thinks the rules still matter. "The application of rules, if you like, is actually more important than the number of people using it," he said. "If you can't apply rules, they're not worth anything." You can debate whether that's true, but overall, Guido and I both agree that a lot of your tweets could be pretty sketchy. And that makes both of us robots.
