G8141 - Sony Xperia XZ Premium(CNN) Police in Russia say they have found a Russian politician who has apparently disappeared into thin air. Law enforcement is now searching for Doku Umarov, who fled into the lawless wilds of the country after he declared a "state of war" between Chechen rebels and Russia's law enforcement agencies. Umarov, a former fighter in the now-defunct rebel Chechen Republic of Ichkeria, has been linked to a string of attacks in the volatile North Caucasus region over the past two years. Aleksandr Bastrykin, the head of the National Antiterrorist Committee, said in December that Umarov is a member of a Chechen group called the Caucasus Emirate and has threatened to blow up a train line that runs through the North Caucasus region. Doku Umarov Umarov was tracked down by security forces in Kaspiisk, on the border between Chechnya and Ingushetia, the Ingushetia Security Council said in a statement posted on its website. "Doku Umarov came to our forces. He was detained as part of the operation. He has been taken to the Russian law enforcement body for further measures," the statement said. "The Russian Federal Security Service together with the Interior Ministry and investigative departments are coordinating the operation." The Ingushetia Security Council said a team of investigative units has been formed to track down Umarov and capture him alive.
